The screenshot shows a web browser window for 'Art Against Displacement' at 'aad.info'. The title 'Art Against Displacement' is on the left. A navigation bar at the top includes 'ABOUT' and language links 'EN', 'ES', and '中文'. The main content area contains a paragraph about the group's mission to amplify demands from displaced residents and work with grassroots organizations for community-led rezoning. It also mentions AAD's membership in the Coalition to Protect Chinatown & the Lower East Side and support for the Chinatown Working Group's Rezoning Plan. Contact information is provided, and social media links for Twitter, Instagram, and Are.na are shown.

About

Based in Manhattan's Chinatown and Lower East Side, Art Against Displacement (AAD) is a coalition of artists and arts professionals that seeks to amplify the demands of those whose lives and livelihoods are placed at risk by predatory development and resettlement, and to work in solidarity with grassroots organizations toward community-led rezoning. The group affirms that gentrification is not an inevitable effect of urban development, and refuses to let the work of cultural producers be instrumentalized towards the displacement of long-term residents and businesses.

AAD is a member of the Coalition to Protect Chinatown & the Lower East Side. AAD supports the passing of the Chinatown Working Group's Rezoning Plan in full.

The term Hearts and Arrows is used to describe the visual effect achieved in a round diamond with perfect symmetry and angles.

The Hearts and Arrows effect is exhibited in all of our round Astor Diamonds. When viewed under special magnification, the perfectly aligned facets of an Astor Diamond reveals the Hearts and Arrows pattern. From the bottom, eight perfectly symmetrical hearts can be seen, and when viewed from the top, eight completely uniform arrows.

AN UNDESIRED FIDELITY

Highbrow and open-handed. Non-denominational and self-same. These were descriptions. Ways of talking about what she came to refer to as her "carbon," her feeling, and thinking about being a type of stereo.

"Stand-ins" were what she liked to call her kind. And if the features on the outside of her group seemed hard to get a fix on, on the average and general, "all for the better," she'd say, and say it as if she was testing words, sentences ... lines that might appear in some future social science fiction.

It's true she had a birthmark, a small, dark, embossed chocolate on her left breast, but she regarded the I.D. more as a novelty, "fresh material," a kind of unnamable after-effect of reproduction's inability to reproduce a copy.

"The thing's a lot more intimate than personal," she'd say, putting her hand on her heart as if she was about to make a pledge. "It's really informal, strange ... I don't know how to say it. It's taken some time to understand it. It was hard to know it didn't come from a single person. Two people were involved. My parents. A coupling. Nothing unusual. That's what I meant by strange, I guess. It seems to attract the attention one expects from communicating delicately."

It seemed funny, because the uniqueness of the spot was the contradiction about her relationship with herself, and with him, too. The "chocolate" was what he liked about her the most. A natural tattoo that might as well have said, "Just for you, Daddy." He could never get tired of that tit, and for him it was like a special place that was no one else's, a place he could rest his head and turn out the lights. The thing was right in the middle of the breast, and it wasn't all that much to flatten out his tongue and go over the whole place, the mark, the nipple, the areola, all in one pass, like he was licking a cone of ice cream.

For both of them, they had come along at the right time. The "right" was hard to explain. Being together made their meeting feel a lot more than just chance. The thing that happened between them really clicked, and there was none of the usual flirtation that accompanied the courtship. There was a psychological orientation of the selves. A mental mechanism where both of them became gratified, supported ... almost relieved by consciously attributing themselves to the characteristics of each other. And as long as they were together, participating collectively, there was no confusion or need to adjust.
